HOUCHIN IS CANDIDATE

is Asking the Democrats of the State to Give Him the Nomination for Governor

Mr. Houchin was defeated for the nomination of governor three years ago, but he made this slogan, "Give Missouri a Business Administration," a household word all over the state.

Mr. Houchin is one of the successful business men in Missouri, and the principles he stands for are of interest to every citizen of this state.

By living in Jefferson City, and being in close touch with the various state departments, Mr. Houchin, through close business observation, has discovered a great many places where economy could be used and the state save thousands of dollars each year, which could go to the building of public roads and other public improvements which are badly needed in the state.

He believes in building up Missouri

HELPS TO BUILD CHARACTER

Why College Life Has a Distinct Value, Apart From Its Educational Privileges.

Just as when a child leaves school and enters business he finds himself battling against a world more or less heartless, so in leaving home and entering college marks his initiation into a small world likewise more or less heartless.

The external changes that come with this are evident even to those who see him daily. Ease of manner, self-confidence and such are noticeable, and the internal development is quite as definite, though less superficially marked. Our characters get their first rounding from our parents and it often happens that the high ideals of middle life—an ideal significant in the repetitive student—are the best streaks in the finished product. "God moves in a mysterious way." It is often a failed course that calls a student to time. A failure to make a accepted student frequently makes a boy take account of himself. And in this way the mistakes that count much in the small world are guards against those that count much in the large—Eleanor Craig Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

My Houchin asks: "Are we going to suffer a world of cycles for the sake of the people's houses? Are the circumstances of all nations off which create unnecessary hardships, unnecessary efforts for the consolidation of public offices when ever possible, use eminent domain to build roads, and manage state institutions like real would your own boy men?"

My Houchin is again seeking the nomination for书记er on the Democratic ticket.

sails." He did not believe that the war would be answered for some time, as he expressed the idea that developments in the Old World which are expected to materialize in the ensuing month would have much to do with the character of the answer returned. "But you may rest assured," he said, "that results will follow, and they will be peaceful ones."

Extra Session Not Probable

Senate Stone did not seem to think it probable that an extra session of congress would be convened—that is, it does not look so probable now—it does not nearly so probable as it did immediately after the sinking of the Lusitania. He appeared to believe that the president might call the senate in session a short time prior to the regular convening day to frame a regular session for the regular session.

The Mexican question will be settled all right he said, if the people of the United States will not get too excited. He felt satisfied that the president had his course and program in the Mexican situation fully mapped out and would put it through on schedule time.

"The Democracy of Missouri is getting together. The few little differences that the opposition has magnified and distorted are adjusted, and we will be found marching shoulder to shoulder when the election drifts around." So how he treated the situation in the state.

The Last Doctor's Diagnosis
Mrs. Murphy—Oh hear yer brother Mike. Pat Keane is pretty bad off.

Mrs. Casey—Shure, he's good for a year yet.

Mrs. Murphy—As long as that?

Mrs. Casey—Yes, he's had four different doctors, and each one of them give him three months to live.

A big Long Drink

Extract from a sentimental letter:

"Last night I sat in a gondola on Venice's Grand Canal drinking it all in,

and life never seemed so full before."
